Business Description

Integrating one or some minerals can produce various types of stones. Stone is one of the main materials in construction used in different parts of the building such as facades, stairs, floors, etc. Due to their high resistance and quality, these products, as the first building materials in human history, are very useful in the construction industry. Selecting a good building stone makes difference in the construction industry. A good building stone should have a healthy appearance, without cracks and rots or grooves, wear resistance, etc. Widespread usage of these stones in the construction industry induces many countries to launch production lines for manufacturing building stones, among them China, India, Italy, Turkey, and Brazil are the biggest producers.
